

Methodology Course within the NFF Doctoral Course Programme

Qualitative Research and Case Study Methodology: Challenging the Boundaries (6 ECTS)

7-11 April 2014

Stockholm Business School has the pleasure to invite Nordic PhD students to apply for a methodology course within the Nordic Academy of Management (NFF) doctoral course programme. The primary purpose of the course is to introduce students to contemporary methodological problems of social science in general and to case study methodology in particular. The course will focus on current attempts to renew method to make it possible to conduct studies on interconnected sites, through which numerous flows of information, substances, bodies, money, technologies, world views, practices, norms, and traditions take place. For more information on learning outcomes and literature, please see this document.

Time, Venue & Lecturers

The course will be held 7-11 April 2014 at our beautiful campus in Kräftriket, Stockholm. The lecturers of the course are Professor Tommy Jensen (Stockholm Business School), Assistant Professor Elena Raviola (Copenhagen Business School) and Professor Runólfur Smári Steinþórsson (University of Iceland Business School).

Application & Costs

There is no tuition fee for the course and expenses for accommodation and lunches will be covered by NFF. Students will only have to cover the cost of their travel to Stockholm and additional expenses during their stay. Apply by sending an e-mail to Linnéa Shore: ls@fek.su.se. Last day of application is 21 February 2014. Notifications of admission will be sent out by 28 February 2014, and additional course information will follow.

Welcome!
